

In a Stable

In a stable long ago,
In a place so far from home,
There a baby lay whose love would change the world.
And the life that started then,
On that night in Bethlehem,
Would become the greatest story ever told.

*And the angels sang at His birth,
And His praises rang through the earth,
And the skies were filled with songs of worship,
Singing praise and glory to God,
On the earth be peace from above,
For the time had come for us to know Him.*

Many angels and a star,
Led the people from afar,
To the place where Christ the Saviour had been born.
It was such an awesome sight,
To behold Him there that night,
And to know His love would last for evermore.

*And the angels sang at His birth,
And His praises rang through the earth,
And the skies were filled with songs of worship,
Singing praise and glory to God,
On the earth be peace from above,*

For the time had come for us to know Him.

As we turn our minds again
To the shepherds and wise men,
And the stable where our story did begin,
Though the manger now has gone,
There's a Saviour who lives on,
With an invitation now to worship Him.

*And the angels sang at His birth,
And His praises rang through the earth,
And the skies were filled with songs of worship,
Singing praise and glory to God,
On the earth be peace from above,
For the time had come for us to know Him.*
